Pickard Again Named Secretary of the Jersey Cattle Breeders' Ass'n

F. G. Gale, of Waterville, Quebec and Professor Sackville, of the University of Alberta, Among the Speakers at Annual Meeting—Slattery Re-elected President—Fees to Be Increased for Ensuing Year

The annual meeting of the Jersey Cattle Breeders' Association of Alberta was held in the office of W. J. Stark, manager of the Edmonton Exhibition Association, on Thursday last. The meeting was called to order by President, Mr. John Slattery.

After the minutes were read, and the financial report presented, there followed considerable discussion on methods of financing the Association for the coming year. It was finally decided to raise the dues to $2.00 per annum, with an additional 25c per head over eight, until a maximum of $5.00 was reached. There were several other discussions and the various

Burglars Not Deterred By Huge Weight

American Cafe In Calgary Scene of Exploit In Early Hours; Stolen Cash Contained $190 In Cash and Number of Oil Stocks

Calgary burglars are becoming more bold every day. Not satisfied with breaking into the American Cafe, 321 Eighth avenue east, and rifling the till or breaking open the cash register, these thieves carried the safe away bodily, probably so they would be able to examine its contents without any molestation from the police, who are very close to the cafe. The safe, which weighed between 250 and 300 pounds and was three feet high by 24 inches in width, was evidently carried out to the back door and placed in a truck.

Don Quong, the owner, told the police that everything was O.K. when the place was closed at 1:30 a.m. on Monday, but the safe was missing at 5 o'clock when the place was re-opened to prepare for the breakfast rush.

There were in the safe $125 in bills and gold valued at $75 besides some oil shares.

Detective James Rae investigated as soon as the police were notified, but could find no trace of the missing safe.

Perhaps the boldest burglary of this kind was that which occurred some 17 years ago when a grocery store on Fifth street, near the river, just across the bridge, was robbed. In this instance the burglars went to the stable in the rear of the store and, hitching up the grocer's own horse to his wagon, backed it up to the front door and, loading up the safe and a large quantity of tobacco and groceries, carried the whole away and then, after blowing up the safe returned the horse and cart. They were eventually discovered.

SCALDED IN BATH TUB

When the mother returned the child had been so badly scalded that death followed within an hour. The coroner decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

Price of Wheat Shot Upwards By Rust Scare

Winnipeg, July 26.—Private reports of rust damage to the growing wheat crop in Western Canada, combined with other bullish factors, forced a general price advance on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange today. Closing values were 1 3/4 to 2 1/8 cents above Monday's final quotations.

Oppressive heat which has enveloped the prairie provinces for two days has greatly aggravated the rust menace and reports which inspired the flurry today indicated that the infection was spreading. All months finished, temperatures below the high points established for the day.

Some Wheat Will Be Cut Within Fortnight Is Forecast of Railway

Quality and Garnet Varieties Near Ripening Stage In Parts of the West—Alberta Conditions Are Generally Excellent, With Prospects of Good Crops—Reports From Ontario Fields Are Highly Optimistic

Winnipeg, July 26.—Quality and Garnet wheat in certain districts will be ready for the binder in two or three weeks time, according to the weekly crop report issued this morning by the agricultural department of the C.P.R. Other varieties of wheat are fast coming into head, and with ample moisture in the ground should fill well. Oats are not quite as far advanced as wheat and barley, but generally are well stocked and healthy.

Corn is reported as backward but was making vigorous growth recently. The department has received a few reports of rust, but the infestations are not serious. Pastures and hay crops could not be better, and winter feed will be plentiful. Livestock is in excellent condition. The weather has been favorable on the days mostly mild and the nights cool.

Crops throughout Manitoba continue to look well, although in low lying districts continued showers have caused an over supply of moisture. A large percentage of the wheat is headed out or is coming into head, and the crop is only slightly behind last year. Sweet clover and cultivated crops are splendid crops, but hay meadows in certain districts are too wet to cut until later. Red rust is reported at High Bluff and Douglas, with traces of black rust at MacGregor and Carberry, some red and black rust is reported in a random district. The infestation has just started and development will depend on weather conditions. Clear dry days and winds will help the wheat.

The crop in Saskatchewan continues to develop satisfactorily with rains and warm weather causing rapid growth. Early wheat is in head and filling out well. The later wheat is in the heading out stage. Coarse grains are developing and although slightly later are expected to turn out well. Red rust is evidence in one or two districts, but infection is slight and (Continued on Page 4)

Child Burned as Celluloid Shade Blazes

Lights a Match When Playing With Other Children and Accident Occurs When Endeavoring to Extinguish It

Hanna, July 23.—With painful burns on the face, little Patie Coughlin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Coughlin, is suffering at her home as the result of an accident which occurred when a celluloid eye shade which she was wearing caught fire.

Little Patie was playing with some other children across the street from her home. She had lighted a match and was endeavoring to blow it out when the projecting eye shade burst into flames. Two playmates, seeing the child's terrible predicament, saved her from more severe burns by tearing at the eye shade and beating out the flames. Fortunately, too, the straps of the shade were of non-inflammable material, or it is certain that more terrible injuries must have resulted.

SAPIRO TAKES RAP AT FORD COUNSEL

Market Expert Carries Feud Of Trial On After Settlement and Criticizes Magistrate's Chief Lawyer

Chicago, July 21.—Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, chief defense counsel of Henry Ford in the $100,000 libel suit brought against the car manufacturer by Aaron Sapiro, is still in disfavour with Sapiro, even if the apologies of his employer have been accepted, Sapiro told a radio audience.

"During the course of the trial," Sapiro said, "Mr. Reed continually availed himself of the opportunity to cast slurs at myself and other Jews. He was continually and purposely mispronouncing my name.

"I still wonder," he also said, "if a member of the Senate has a moral right to take money for the defense of religious bigotry. As a senator, Mr. Reed is being paid by people of all denominations."

He also stated that Ford had done more than was expected, but that no such credit could be given Senator Reed.

THE KID BROTHER

(By Jack Becholdt)

There was so vast a difference between the step-brothers that their relationship on the paternal side was always a matter of surprise to strangers.

Bob Carroll, christened Robert Renfrew Carroll, even as a boy was handsome. By some miracle of nature he seemed to escape altogether that weedy, long-legged, spindly voiced period that embarrasses young males, and often renders them miserable for years of maturity.

Bob passed from the beloved toddler to Pouterhood, to sturdy red-check boyhood, to alert, confident young manhood by delightfully imperceptible gradations.

Dark of hair and eyes, handsome of feature, he played all games well, developed a fine body, danced gracefully, made friends without effort, and eventually became one of the leading young business men of Seven Oaks.

William—he was never called Bill for obvious reasons—was the younger, the son of Oscar Carroll's second wife. A ten-haired boy, he began life ailing and continued ailing until he had exhausted nature's catalogue of annoyances. As a consequence he was slender, undeveloped, short sighted. He never tanned in summer but burned himself. Piles, gas, ails, leprosy, and meningitis, marked him as easy meat. Pulsion and he tried his way with him. He bruised and bled and generally made himself unscathed through no fault of his own.

Wearing the spectacles he was made to assume to correct his short-sightedness, William was the most giggling, rosy, giggled, squeaked, voiced adolescent in Seven Oaks. He was universally known as "Bob Carroll's kid brother." His biography is the story of an ineffectual battle to live down that title.

The boyhood swimming pool of Seven Oaks was about half a mile north of the village, at a bend in the mid-manned Little river. William learned to dog-paddle when he was seven.

Bob, then nearing eleven, was taking up the art of diving in a serious way. William watched his brother's diving with awestruck attention. He attempted his first dive before he was even sure he could dog-paddle back to the bank.

A long time William stood that day on the muddy bank, a foot or two above the pool, not so abjectly that it seemed that a breeze might blow him away, blue with chill, in a mortal funk.

He didn't like the water, he didn't care much about swimming, and he could have as readily thrown him self under an express train as hurt his fragile body, head down, at the pool. But Bob dived and William was going to learn.

The others jeered him and dared him until they tired of the sport. Then, unexpectedly, came the splash. William had dived.

It was probably the worst dive in the history of boyhood. The shrill, cruel laughter of youth rose to screams of comic ecstasy, hesitated and faded to silent silence.

Bob Carroll, Rachel on the spring, heard in a beautiful way, his body cutting the water with scarily a ripple. He emerged in a moment, bringing William from the bottom.

Even in his state of coma there was, on William's face, a comical expression of bewilderment and mild protest. They drained William out, pumped some air into his lungs and set him aside to dry and get over his nausea.

Finally he emerged from the bushes shakily and stood again on the bank, the tortures of realization compounding with those of anticipation. But he dived again, and again was fished up, the water with scarily a ripple. He emerged in a moment, bringing William from the bottom.

and watched him with ill-concealed amusement. "Here, kid," he ordered good naturedly, "look! Get a head on the thing, see? Like this. Then pull easy and steady—see?"

"You give that back!" William cried, snatching the weapon. "I can shoot without you bossing me."

In time William did learn to shoot, but then the air rifle had lost its luster. Shiny was the game, and Bob was a wunder at shiny.

Bob Carroll was a football star in his freshman year at high school. He remained an idol throughout his four years. William could not make even the scrub team. The game they played in those days called for weight.

One scrimmage served to send William off the field with a broken collar bone. But they let him wear a sweater and sit on the side lines with a ready bucket of water and a sponge.

"Because he was Bob Carroll's kid brother," he grunted his teeth at that title, but he served the school loyally.

At university William was Bob Carroll's kid brother again. Illness had postponed his freshman year until after Bob's graduation. To William the title was a hateful epithet.

In former years he had fought, usually unsuccessfully, when boys called him Bob Carroll's kid brother. Unable to fight a university, he resolved to outshine Bob and live down the title.

A quiet, homely, rather awkward tow-haired young man, William lacked Bob's electric personality and spectacular success, but his friends made slowly remained steadfastly loyal to him, and he went after scholastic honors with a grim determination amounting to obsession.

He became a star of the debating society. He wrote leaders for the literary monthly that attracted considerable attention. His work on the weekly paper got him a correspondence for a metropolitan daily—unusual recognition.

In his sophomore year he was the popular candidate for editor of the monthly, sure of election. Just before that triumph his father died and he was called home to Seven Oaks.

At mention of his name alumni of the institution scratched their heads and said, "Who, William. Oh, yes, Bob Carroll's kid brother!"

The year Joe left college Bob Carroll formed a partnership with his father to exploit some acreage he had inherited into residential lots. Several factories had located at Seven Oaks.

The town was growing, there was demand for property, and the Carrolls started toward success. This village said it was due to Bob's house and modern ideas. Bob inherited the business at his father's death, it being understood that he would look after the future of his younger brother.

Seven Oaks said: "Bob Carroll's going to make things hum, see if he don't. He's the kind of young fellow this town needs." What young fellow was said about William it was usually the prediction that he was lucky to be Bob's kid brother.

William received five thousand dollars as his share of the money left by his father.

The day the estate was settled, as he handed William a cheque, Lawyer Ezra Penny said, "What are you planning to do with it?"

William mumbled something about being undecided.

"Your father would want to see you use it wisely," the lawyer went on kindly, "it would hurt him if you frittered it away."

"Yes, sir," William agreed. Though he was in his 22nd year his voice still betrayed him at times with ridiculous treble squeaks, so he used it as little as possible.

The lawyer studied him shrewdly, a slender, pudgy young man with restless hands, always at ease.

"I tell you, William," he exclaimed heartily, "take my advice and stick to your brother Bob. Bob's going to do big things in this town. There's a good chance for you in his business. Invest your money and stick to Bob and you'll find it the wisest thing you ever did in your life!"

"I—m—m—m," said William more at ease than ever. "Well, good-bye, sir."

Lawyer Penny watched William down the street from his window and shook his head. "A middling young fellow," he thought, "he's got a brother that's up and coming."

Next day the village was astonished to learn that William had gone—departed bag and baggage for parts unknown. Bob Carroll did not explain much.

"He wants to try his luck by himself," was the best explanation. "He's welcome to it if he feels that way."

There had been something of a scene that night after dinner in the Carroll house. Bob had made his brother a very generous proposition.

"What you want to do is to go into business with me, kid. This town is going to make a lot of money. Now I can take you on as a salesman, and if you can make good with a little coaching from me, I'll take you into full partnership. You stick to me and you'll never regret it."

At this point William flung out of his chair, tense and white.

"You go to h—!" he shouted, and his voice went up to a childish squeak that added to his rage. "You can't add to your real estate business, and go to h—!" Stick here in Seven Oaks, go into business with you, and have the whole town say for ever afterwards that you made my fortune?"

Stick to you, he called Bob Carroll's kid brother the rest of his life. Say—Words failed him. He rushed from the room and began to pack his box.

Bob had made the proposition in all good faith. He felt a little virtuous about getting William a good turn. He failed utterly to understand William's reasons for trying in a rage.

From his point of view he had every right to feel put out, down right angry even, at such base ingratitude.

William meant to get so far from Seven Oaks that nobody would have heard of Bob Carroll or his kid brother. When he got to such a place he meant to make a gorgeous success of himself. Then he would come home and show Seven Oaks the stuff William was made of. But never, so long as he lived—this he swore again—would he give up energy in his trail body—would he return to Seven Oaks and Bob until his ambition was achieved.

He had just one purpose in life, and the same stubbornness or courage or high ideal, or whatever it was that had carried him to dive again, he was going to do it as well as Bob, was going to hold him to his rocky road.

Seattle looked like a good place. The city was at the height of its real estate boom. An engineering genius was moving unnecessary hills into the harbor almost overnight.

Fortunes were being made as rapidly. Best of all, nobody in Seattle seemed to have heard of Seven Oaks or Bob Carroll, or if anybody had heard, he was too busy to recall the fact.

William invested his patrimony in an open office in a corner lot that he promised to double in value in 90 days. Within that 90 days the boom, which had been wobbling on its unsteady plumbline, fell with a sickening thud.

It was no consolation to William to know he had lots of company in misfortune. And at that particular time he was in a desperate financial straits, although he was reputedly rich. It was a personal success, a vivid glory reflected wherever his magnetic self had been known.

Living, he had been the big man of Seven Oaks; dead, he was a popular hero. Bob died a widower with no child. His will, which had just been made public, left his fortune to found and maintain a free public library in the town.

William was shocked by the news—tremendously shocked. He mourned Bob's death sincerely, recalling all the fine traits, the lovable things about Bob.

"When the shock lessened, when custom staled the poignancy of his grief at his stepbrother's taking, he realized that he was back in the same old Seven Oaks, obliged wherever he went to listen to the praise of his dead hero. trouble securing advance payment on deliveries.

Success was as certain as daylight when one day the country went to war. Overnight William failed. The factory which he represented could not fill orders. Its entire output was needed by the war department.

The army would not have William on any terms. His brother Bob had won a captivity after his course in one of the government school camps.

Purposely unannounced, William came home. He brought a wife with him. She had been a stenographer in the war days when he had charge of getting out airplane spruce for the government.

William loved her for herself; but the fact that her family, while not rich, was socially prominent in the Pacific northwest, that she herself was a very highly finished social product and a glittering ornament to any home, immensely increased his satisfaction.

She was not the least part of his triumph—the success he sought so many years, though that success included two modern city business blocks, a lumber camp and mill, a fleet of five steam schooners, direct ship in four corporations, a town house, a country house, two motor cars, and a cruising power boat worthy the name yacht.

William came home to Seven Oaks unannounced. He meant to blaze like a meteor across the Seven Oaks sky. This was his day, hard won, but he had won it. At last he was a bigger man than Bob. He had ceased to be a kid brother.

William came home and the first news he heard—it was Lawyer Ezra Penny encountered by chance on the street who told him—that Bob was dead.

Bob had died two weeks before. William's address was unknown. He kept it unknown, anticipating his triumph, and thus he came home to a shock.

Bob Carroll died the town's greatest man. Had he lived another year he might have exchanged the title of colonel, won during the war, for governor. His success was not alone financial, although he was reputedly rich. It was a personal success, a vivid glory reflected wherever his magnetic self had been known.

Living, he had been the big man of Seven Oaks; dead, he was a popular hero. Bob died a widower with no child. His will, which had just been made public, left his fortune to found and maintain a free public library in the town.

Renfrew Carroll free public library in Seven Oaks.

Success! Bob! Lucky Bob! William thought back to his boyhood. Bob had the luck, then, good health, a fine body, a charming, friend-winning manner. And, he, William, had plodded in his footsteps, slaving to reach the things which felt like Bob's hands.

From the days of the swimming hole it had been the same story: Bob doing the fancy diving, William the painful floundering; Bob winning applause, William the jeers. From the days of the swimming hole until his last days, when Bob's investments had been butted so thin that there seemed no human way to save them—and death made him a greater man than ever!

A shocking thought occurred to William. Bob had reached the end of his rope at last! It was his own turn to triumph now, and nobody could say he had not earned his triumph by agony of flesh and spirit. Now Seven Oaks would find out who was really the great man!

William was ashamed of the idea—seemed to prove that he was entitled and fascinated by it. Every argument on and against it only seemed to prove that he was entitled to the triumph.

"Well," said the lawyer finally, "I thought you'd better know first. Nothing to do, I guess, but file the inventory with the court. It's going to be a blow to this town—not only on account of the library, but because of everybody admiring Bob so."

He was a sort of bodyguard here, a model for boys to copy, to emulate, you might say.

William laid his hand on a thin bundle of securities and spoke reluctantly in his uninteresting monotone.

Bob had about this Consolidated Trolley stock."

The lawyer snorted. "You could buy the whole company for a few German marks today! Looked like a good thing when it was organized. If they had run that interurban service to the state capital it would have been a good thing; but politics got mixed up in it. Lord, I thought Bob had sold out at before the crash—he told me he did!"

"Have you asked about the stock lately?"

"Huh! Might's well ask after the health of Julius Caesar—or old man Noah."

"You never can tell about those traction things," William murmured. "Better write some good city broker, anyhow. And say, while you're inquiring, just hold off your inventory, say a week or two—there might be something we've overlooked. Give me a little time to dig around. Bob seems to have been sort of careless about his affairs—might find something. Somehow it doesn't sound like Bob, flattening out this way. Bob was a big man!"

"Diggest man this town will ever see!" Penny agreed. "Take the time to look around if you think you can do anything. God knows I'm not anxious to give the town this bad news!"

William promised to do his best, and went his way. Penny felt hopelessly discouraged—more discouraged than before he had consulted William.

"If the case was just reversed and it was Bob who was trying to help," he sighed. "Gosh! I'd expect most anything to happen!"

William went to a broker in the city and gave him secret orders and a liberal allowance to draw upon. Then he came back to Seven Oaks and continued to do nothing in particular and he even less than that in the eyes of the town.

But when the inventory of Bob Carroll's estate was filed he turned out to be richer than anybody expected. A reorganization of Consolidated Trolley had made the old securities worth a fortune. Other investments seemingly hopeless turned out gold mines.

Lawyer Penny felt vaguely that William had a lot to do with the miracle, yet every time he looked at William the thought seemed utterly untrue. William never gave him cause to believe otherwise.

William returned to Seven Oaks for a brief visit two years after his brother's death. He stood before the newly finished memorial library and read the inscription over its door and the corner stone which recorded the greatness of Robert Renfrew Carroll in everlasting granite.

William felt the same curious irritation he had known since he had striven to win some of the applause

Bob had got so easily by diving into the swimming pool.

But he managed to smile as he murmured, "He deserves it. He certainly deserves a monument from me! If I hadn't had Bob to set the pace I never would have got anywhere—he was trying to catch up with Bob that made a man of me. I ought to be grateful!"

"Confound him!" William burst out aloud, all gratitude forgot. "He beat me all his life and he beat me by dying. Now, I suppose, when they hand me out my heavenly harp I'll find Bob leading the whole blessed orchestra!"

Damsel Fly With Us; Tackles Big Contract

Reddish-Brown Insect Is Unlike the Well-Known "Darning Needle" and Preys on the Pesky "Skeeter," Who Has Been Playing Havoc This Summer

The city and surrounding district is fairly alive with damsel flies as well as the pesky mosquito. It is a quaint, reddish-brown dragon-fly type of double-winged insect that is here in greater numbers than have been seen for a great many years. And it is on this hovering, darting giant of the insect family that hopes are being set.

The damsel fly is an enemy of the mosquito, and more than that, he feeds upon the stinging pest. Like the mosquito, too, he breeds in watery places chiefly and has increased tremendously with the wet season. He is mostly carnivorous and when seen darting in and out among plants, grasses and reeds, he is seeking out his prey, the obnoxious mosquito.

The damsel fly is of the same order as the dragon fly and lays its eggs on grass stems and leaves overhanging water. When hatched, the larvae fall into the water, where they live and are quite active, in fact these larvae feed on the mosquito larvae that are in the water. Then when the larvae are hatched they, too, continue the hunt of the mosquito in its developed state. Thus in two stages of its life does the homely damsel fly make life burdensome for one of man's worst enemies.

Whether or not the damsel fly will overcome the mosquito is yet to be found. The mosquito is laying eggs all the time and it would need millions and millions more damsel flies to cope with the situation.

SOME WHEAT WILL

confined to the leaves. As previously reported, hail caused damage on July 18 and 19 chiefly in Asinibet, Shewan, Vanguard, Five Lake and Outlook divisions, and on the night of July 21, 2,000 acres four miles north of Estevan were completely hulled out.

A considerable acreage of the hulled wheat is showing signs of recovery, and it will be a week before it will be possible to determine the percentage of grain completely destroyed. Hay is a record yield, but frequent rains make curing difficult.

Crop conditions in Alberta are reported as excellent. The moisture is ample, and all that is now required is a shower or two while the grain is filling. Wheat is coming in head. Considerable oats and barley is also in head. Cutting winter rye has commenced in the south, the crop being in excellent stand. The hay crop is the best in years and the pastures are particularly good. Sweet clover crop is heavy and now being harvested. Hail damage during the week at Aberystwyth, Stettin and Taber subdivisions. The losses ranging from five to 50 per cent, with as high as 2,000 acres affected in some localities. No reports of rust or other damage.

Weather conditions in British Columbia were ideal during the week. Crops are looking fine and promising good yields. Fruit is sizing up satisfactorily and with the exception of stone fruits will show a good average. Apples and loganberries are moving in volume. Strawberry movement is complete, with loganberry and raspberry movement at the peak. In the Okanagan some apple scab has developed, but is not of a serious character. Some early peaches, apricots and Yellow Transparent apples have commenced to move.

Calgary, July 25.—Hail damage through southern Alberta has been slight, according to special correspondents of The Herald. A swath was cut through from here inland to Seven Persons, a little to the east of Clonook, some at Chinook and a slight fall at Mountain View, near Cardston. This, in addition to heavy falls at Cochrane and in the immediate vicinity of Calgary, constitutes the sum total, according to reports.

Since the heavy rainfalls, sunshine and warm weather has prevailed, and wonderful growth has been the result. Wheat in many places is heading up with heavy straw and long, well-filled heads, and it is expected that all wheat will be headed out next week.

Estimates are placed at from 20 to 40 bushels per acre, all depending, of course, on favorable weather from now till harvest time. Apart from hail, there is no other damage reported, pests being almost entirely absent.

Pastures are in excellent condition, and hay is heavy.

Looks Good in Ontario

"Toronto, July 26.—"Too much rain" is the general report from all parts of the province dealing with conditions during the past week, the Government's weekly report says.

The general outlook, however, is pretty well summed up in the following words: "Prospects for a bumper crop look exceedingly good if favorable weather develops. If wet weather conditions crop generally will be too heavy, with the resulting effect of small yields of grain." Meantime harvesting operations are proceeding. In Essex the wheat harvest is 75 per cent complete with every indication of heavy yields. Barley cutting has commenced, and will be general this week. Proceeding eastward harvesting operations will be just slightly later, but wheat cutting will be general this week if weather conditions are satisfactory.

The weather man is certainly favoring us with plenty of rainfall this summer. Tuesday he spoilt the plans of the management of the Gwynne Stampede. Monday evening he pushed a storm over our fair city that resembled a cloud burst for a little while. Next week The Times will report the amount of precipitation for the month in comparison with other years.

Among the many Wetaskiwinites who attended the Edmonton Exhibition last week was the budding scribbler of this paper. It was very interesting to see the many exhibits on display there, particularly that of the Wetaskiwin district. The exhibit was excellent, but it was felt that it hardly did full justice to our fair district, which is undoubtedly the best in the province.

A MENACE TO BATHERS

With the many drowning accidents that occur each year, the swollen condition of the Pipestone Creek has been brought to the Times reporter's attention as a possible menace to bathers. We understand that last week a boy was swept off his feet and carried some distance down the stream before he was able to get back to safety. It would be well that parents give their children who bathe in the creek a warning about the dangers encountered, and in this way minimize the possibility of fatal accidents occurring.

TO FORM ATHLETIC BODY AND MAKE PLANS IN NEAR FUTURE FOR A GORGEOUS SPORTSFEST

Local Enthusiasts Discuss Various Angles and Adjourn to Hold a Further Meeting on Friday Evening of This Week, When Permanent Organization to Control Sports May Be Effectuated

There'll be no two-days' program of baseball and horse racing, etc., here next month, as has been noted. That is one outcome of the meeting held in the city council chamber on Monday evening, at the call of Mayor Montgomery, in response to representation made to His Worship that something should be done.

There was not a large gathering present, but where there was lack of numbers there was an abundance of enthusiasm, and an interchange of opinions that augured well for the future of sport in this community. The editorial comment, which appeared in last week's Times apparently met with universal favor among those assembled, there being a unanimity of opinion that organization should be effected to ensure the citizens of Wetaskiwin and surrounding country sports of a varied and really attractive nature and plenty of it. It was generally recognized that the sporting instinct had not been as prominent as it should have been for some considerable time and that a revival was overdue.

Consideration was given, at the outset, to the possibilities of conducting a two-days sports meet at the Exhibition Grounds this year, with a baseball tournament as the big card, and horse racing, midway attractions, carnival stunts, etc., also much in the limelight. But it was generally conceded that the year was ageing fast, and that furthermore, it would be necessary to stage any such doings within three weeks at the latest to avoid a clash with harvest operations. Three weeks would not give the promoters an even chance to make preparations for an elaborate program. A committee of three, consisting of Messrs. McArthur and Hurst and Mayor Montgomery, was selected, however, to deliver further into the possibilities and report back to another meeting, which will be held tomorrow evening in the council chamber, and at which it is hoped there will be a much larger attendance. The committee has since reported that in its opinion it would be impracticable to attempt to do anything further in the matter.

The meeting was decidedly of opinion that the organization of an Athletic Association should be effected at once, to assume a permanent and definite interest in various lines of sport, including hockey and track and field events, not only with respect to the activities of the grown-ups, but to instill into the younger people through proper government a more enthusiastic spirit.

It was also tentatively decided that, next year, not alone would this Association provide for the citizens a varied line of sports from time to time throughout the year, but that organization would be effected for the holding of a monster celebration of two or three days on or about July 1st, and that it would be the most attractive string of doings ever held in this section of Alberta.

So, tomorrow night, folks, if you've got any signs of sporting blood running through your veins, trot over to the city hall and join in the deliberations which loom up as being a real honest-to-goodness prelude to a revival of sports in this community, which cannot but be of inestimable value to Wetaskiwin in many ways.

Of the total, Saskatchewan farmers will receive $17,825,000 Alberta $6,500,000, and Manitoba $2,675,000.

No payment is being made at this time on coarse grains, but a final payment will be announced soon, Mr. Ramsay said.

Mr. Ramsay also announced the following as the initial prices for deliveries on the new crop (1927) on basis of Port William.

ALBERTA AHEAD IN LIVESTOCK RAISING

Figures Have Greatly Diminished Since Census Taken in 1921, Though Great Increase in Number of Hogs Raised

Edmonton, July 26.—While the number of horses and cattle on Alberta farms has decreased since 1921, the agricultural census of 1926, carried out by the Dominion bureau of statistics, shows that there has been a great increase in the number of hogs raised and an appreciable increase in sheep farming.

The number of Alberta farms has also decreased since 1921. The figure for 1926 is 77,130, while that of 1921 is 82,954.

Cattle on farms in 1926 numbered 1,159,734, in contrast to 1,408,555 in 1921. Horses in 1926 were 769,195, compared to 888,520 in 1921. On the other hand, such has been the results of efforts to improve quality and quantity in hog breeding, that there has been an increase from 1921 to 1926 of from 425,539 to 700,759. Sheep increased from 481,479 to 475,849.

The number of livestock per farm in Alberta in 1926 was 9.97 horses, 15.04 cattle, 6.17 sheep and 9.99 swine, compared to 1921 figures of 9.99, 16.89, 5.20 and 5.14.

Alberta easily leads in the number of farms for the three prime breeds, according to the bureau's figuring. Manitoba only has 6.38 horses, 11.43 cattle, 2.12 sheep and 5.71 swine. Saskatchewan has 9.34 horses, 9.79 cattle, 1.37 sheep and 5.07 swine. Actual totals for 1926 for Saskatchewan and Manitoba show that Saskatchewan has 117,387 farms with 1,099,657 horses, 1,152,383 cattle, 161,709 sheep, and 697,455 swine. Manitoba has 53,251 farms with 339,756 horses, 605,533 cattle, 112,696 sheep, and 304,275 swine.

Uniform Rules of Traffic Sought by Alta. Motorists

Special Committee Will Shortly Take Up Perplexing Task—Legal Opinion Tendered That No Definite Speed Limit Is Fixed By Statute

When traffic regulations across the continent are shaped in similar legislative moulds and applied with practical uniformity on all public thoroughfares, then car drivers will be advanced a considerable distance on the road to an automobile Utopia.

First things first, however, is the motto of the Alberta Motor Association, and the adoption of a uniform system of traffic control in the province is the first change sought in present hit and miss regulations in the various municipalities. Some time ago the A.M.A. took up the matter of uniform traffic rules and appointed a special committee to investigate the question and make recommendations which might with advantage be submitted to the government, cities and towns for consideration. This special committee, composed of Calgary and Edmonton officials of the organization, will shortly undertake this perplexing but highly important task assigned to them by the members.

A move along similar lines was made recently by the American Automobile Association, which, in national convention, took a firm stand for uniform traffic control throughout the country. The decision was:

"Resolved, that the American Automobile Association go on record as favoring the adoption of a uniform system of traffic control, applicable to municipalities as well as states, and that the legislative committee be authorized and empowered to take such measures as will bring about this result."

The resolution endorsed by the Alberta Motor Association on the subject was to the following effect:

"Whereas it is expedient that people throughout the province and people visiting the province should easily become familiar with all the traffic rules and regulations of the province,

"Be it resolved by the Alberta Motor Association in general meeting assembled that in its opinion traffic regulations should be, as far as possible, uniform throughout the province, and should either be established by provincial statutes or the cities and towns should be prevailed upon to adopt uniform regulations.

"Be it further resolved that the executive of this association should appoint a committee, who, in addition to the chairman, shall be of such number that half may and shall be residents of Calgary, and half in Edmonton, whose duty it shall be to take up the question of traffic regulations, and after investigation, make recommendations as to what may seem to be the best regulations to make traffic safe with as little delay and trouble as possible to traffic."

In view of the general protest which has been aroused in the province among motorists who have fallen foul of the provincial police for driving in excess of 20 miles an hour on the main highways, it is probable that representations will be made to the provincial government by officials of the A.M.A. for certain changes and modifications in the new Vehicles and Highways Traffic Act during the next session of the legislature.

In this connection, President C. H. Grant, K.C., president of the A.M.A., has given a legal opinion to the effect that no definite speed limit is fixed by statute in the province other than "A rate of speed which is unreasonable, having regard to all the circumstances, condition and use of the highway and the amount of traffic which is then, or might reasonably be expected, on the highway."

MANY SURGEONS LIKELY TO DIE OF X-RAY EXPOSURE WITHIN TEN YEARS

New York, N.Y., July 25.—A crop of X-ray martyrs is expected to be harvested by the Grim Reaper some time within the next ten years, in the opinion of Dr. August St. John, consulting physicist of this city.

These casualties will be Great War physicians who took chances in order to save the lives of some soldiers on whom they were operating and exposed their hands to the dreaded X-rays, he said. These men, Dr. St. John explained, decided on the spot of the moment in some cases that they would take a chance on science evolving something to aid them 15 or 20 years later, rather than decline to do everything humanly possible for some wounded soldier.

The science of X-ray long ago progressed to the point where there is no longer any necessary danger in working with X-rays, according to scientists. Under modern conditions, no one can be injured by X-rays, except in case of gross negligence or by willful exposure, they say.

The Camera As Hawk

The top part of this picture is what a 14,000-ton liner looks like from a height of over 250 feet. This picture of the Cunarder Albatross was snapped perilously from the topmost girder of the famous Quebec bridge over the St. Lawrence. It is the first time that such a photograph has ever been taken.

Below is what the bridge looks like from a Cunarder's deck. Although the centre span of the structure is 153 feet above high water level, the masts of the ship clear only just comfortably, and, to the watching passengers, miraculously.

MOSQUITOES ALLEGED TO BE THE WORST IN THIRTY-FIVE YEARS

Good crops of grain are usually accompanied by some drawbacks among them heavy crops of mosquitoes. This year is no exception, as the little pests appear to be more active, vigorous, energetic, prodigal and blood-thirsty than for many years past. They are also present in a mighty host. An outdoor evening siesta is far from enjoyable just now.

The authority of G. T. Montgomery of Port Saskatchewan, is given for the statement that mosquitoes are worse this year than at any time since 1892. Mr. Montgomery had a speaking acquaintance with the mosquito family in 1892 and has followed their domestic affairs with great interest since then. No one will be inclined to dispute his statement.

In some places it has been impossible for horses to continue working due to the tantalizing attacks of mosquitoes. Summer-fallowing has been held up for this cause.

The immense amount of stagnant water which has accumulated during the past six weeks is responsible for the plague. Conditions are ideal for mosquito multiplication and full advantage has been taken by papa and mamma mosquito.—Vegreville Observer.

EARLY DAY RELICS HUDSON'S BAY CO. PLACED ON EXHIBITION IN WINNIPEG

Winnipeg, July 12.—Relics of the history of the Hudson's Bay Company were exhibited here recently for the first time. Many old documents, books from old libraries used in the long nights of the Arctic, swords, guns, marriage licenses, signed before the company officers, and examples of life from every part of the country touched by the company were on view.

A model of the Nonsuch ketch, the little ship that dared the ice floes of Hudson Bay in 1668; a facsimile of the charter granted by King Charles II. in 1670, along with the deed of surrender of land by the Hudson's Bay Company to the Dominion of Canada, portrayed the historical events linked up with the opening of the north country. Andrew McDonald's peppercorn lease of land for 1000 years on payment of one peppercorn a year, is among the collection.

They are thriving Swiss settlements in Notre Dame de Lourdes, Manitoba, and Stettler, Alberta.

Ottawa's memorial carillon, to be installed in the new Victory Tower at the Capital, arrived in Canada May 20 on the Canadian Pacific steamship "Balfour." The huge bells, weighing in all about 55 tons, will constitute one of the finest carillons in the world. They were cast at the Croydon bell foundry in England.

Word comes from the Engineering Department of the Canadian Pacific Railway that when the Banff Springs Hotel opens on May 15th, for the summer season, the north wing of the building will have been completed and ready for occupancy.

Next year at the same date the south wing will have been rebuilt, which will constitute a big improvement of the public hotel of over 600 rooms and baths, as well as its other splendid accommodations.

The Fukuoka Wireless Receiving Station, claimed to be the largest of its kind in the East, was opened recently. All wireless messages from America and Europe will now be received there. Work on this Japanese station was begun last August costing over $300,000. The station is equipped with a transmitting apparatus which, however, will not be used except in an emergency.

TAKE A LITTLE HOLIDAY
Many business men claim they do better work and keep in better condition by playing a bit—as the poet says:

"A little work, a little play
To keep you going—and so, good-day!
A little warmth, a little light
Of love's bestowing—and so, good-night!"

"A little fun to match the sorrow
Of each day's growing—and so, good-morrow!
A little trust that when we die
We reap our sowing—and so, good-bye!"

TAKE TIME TO SMILE
In a small country church a baby was brought for baptism. The minister, taking the little one in his arms, spoke as follows:

"Beloved hearers, no one can foretell the future of this little child. He may grow up to be a great astronomer like Sir Isaac Newton, or a great soldier like Lord Kitchener. It is even possible that he may become our prime minister. Turning to the mother, he inquired, 'What is the name of the child?'"

"Mary Ann," was the reply.

Greenland has no mice, except in the extreme north. There are no snakes and there are no frogs. Of course there is a lot of ice which does not seem to attract even the snakes, but it is just probable that Saint Patrick may have visited Greenland and that would account for the absence of the snakes.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Mutual Creamery Co. (Wetaskiwin Branch of the Woodland Dairy, Edmonton), advertises that it is handling Pool cream. The Alberta Dairy Pool has made no arrangement with the above Company for handling Pool Cream or Milk in Wetaskiwin.

Although several creameries opposed to the Pool are trying to break the producers organization, few have been bold enough to openly admit it.

Monopolies tend to eliminate competition. They reduce manufacturing costs. They attempt to control prices, and they earn the largest profits.

As producers, we have just as much right to form a so-called monopoly to reduce costs of manufacturing, to try to control prices of the products we sell, and to earn a larger profit for ourselves. A limited amount of feed will earn more profit when fed to one good cow than when fed to two cows. That's common sense. Creameries are like cows. A certain amount of cream fed to one creamery will produce more profit than when fed to two creameries. That's the same kind of common sense. That is the reason the Pool is only operating one creamery at Wetaskiwin, namely, the Wetaskiwin Creamery Co.

If you want increased profits, you must reduce your overhead. That's common sense, too. Think it over.
